

TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX TELEVISION DISTRIBUTION AND M6 GROUP EXTEND THEIR MULTIYEAR PROGRAMMING AGREEMENT

Twentieth Century Fox Television Distribution and French television broadcaster M6 Group have signed a multiyear agreement, which gives the French Network Free and Basic TV rights to broadcast a diverse range of the studio's film and television programming.

Under the terms of the agreement, M6 has acquired the exclusive rights to air a broad selection of the studio's TV series including Touch, as well as Academy Award®-winning films and popular library films and series. Programming is slated to air across multiple M6 Group channels, including W9, 6Ter, Paris Première, Teva, Série Club, TF6.

The deal was a collaborative effort negotiated by Twentieth Century Fox Television Distribution offices in Los Angeles and Paris, and the M6 Group.

“We are looking forward to continuing our long-standing and successful partnership with M6, and to working closely with all the channels in the M6 family,” said Gérard Grant, SVP, International Television, Twentieth Century Fox Television Distribution. He added, “France is a very important territory for us, and M6 has continued to be a strong partner since the days we brought them their first American feature film Speed, and hit television series such as Prison Break. We are committed to continuing to deliver our very best content to French viewers and aim to keep M6 audiences entertained with quality TV series and hit feature films in the years to come.”

According to Bernard Majani, Head of Acquisitions M6 Group, « all channels of the M6 Group are very pleased with this extended partnership with Twentieth Century Fox as this partnership perfectly matches our commitment to bring only high quality programs to our audience ».
